CHAPTER II

METHOD OF STUDY

2.1 Data Collecting

This thesis was being done by using library research. As my primary source, I have picked out many books to be looked into other references and as guidance. I also browse some opinions about the intrinsic elements in Beloved from the internet to add my understanding. The secondary source is the novel itself. I read the novel several times to get full understanding about what is told about and to find out the intrinsic elements that are contained in the novel. After that I underlined and make separation of analyzing the person or character in relation to sequence of plot, setting, theme, point of view, and style. This is important to do because each of them is closely connected to one another to support the story of the novel.

2.2 Data Selecting

In collecting data, all the information or the important things that I had collected in the first step were selected and only the very significant data or related data were used in the process of making the analysis of this thesis. The selection is based on the intrinsic elements that are being discussed.
2.3 Data Analyzing

The last step is analyzing the data. I use the descriptive method in analyzing the data. Descriptive method is a method of analysis by describing and analyzing the data and then giving interpretation and explanation. All the selected data were analyzed to prove what are being written in the objective of this thesis and finally I can draw the conclusion for this thesis.
